

SALUS HERBS – GROWN AS PURELY AS NATURE INTENDED

At Salus, our primary concern is to produce herbal teas of the highest quality, so we take great care to ensure that they are grown under the very best natural conditions. For this reason we have purchased two organic farms in southern Chile, where conditions are ideal for the organic cultivation of many herbs, due to there being exceptionally low levels of environmental pollution and little risk of contamination from industrial pollutants. Salus manages and runs these farms in order to ensure that herbs are grown according to strict biological cultivation guidelines in which NO pesticides or fertilizers are used. This, in turn, contributes to the environmental preservation of local eco-systems and ensures the well-being of local communities.

QUALITY CONTROL AND PRODUCTION

At Salus we demand high standards of herb cultivation, pharmaceutical standard production and strict quality control methods when manufacturing our products. The herbs used in the manufacture of our tea range are subjected to stringent and comprehensive scientific testing, using the latest techniques and laboratory equipment. The herbs are tested for:

- Identity
- Active compounds
- Purity
- Chemical residues and other contaminants
- Harmful micro-organisms
- Pesticide and herbicide residues
- Heavy metal content
- Radioactivity

Having passed all necessary tests, the herbs are then hygienically filled into unbleached filter bags which are free from all chemical additives. Numerous quality control procedures and comprehensive documentation at all stages of production ensure the highest standards are reached, so that you can enjoy your tea to the fullest.
